new President and Chairman of Governing Board, Mr Olufunke Amolegbe.

In line with the institute's convention, CIS said an important aspect of the investiture would be the formal send-off of the immediate past President, Mr Adedapo Adekoje.

The institute said Amolegbe scaled up the corporate ladder, for a two-year tenure, in a seamless transition, on May 19, 2020, after the virtual Annual General Meeting, which effectively marked the end of Adekoje's tenure.

It said Amolegbe's investiture, the eleventh in the series, would mark the formal handing over from Adekoje, who would decorate the new president with the paraphernalia of the office.

CIS described Amolegbe as a fellow of the Institute and an accomplished economist, consummate stockbroker, investment analyst and asset manager, with over 28 years' experience in the finance industry, covering virtually all aspects of the business at various levels.

According to CIS, he was the immediate past first Vice President.

In pursuit of the institute's capacity building, its scheduled virtual training for the Capital Market Correspondents on scholarship commences in August and will end in November.

economics, business accounting and business management.

Ajadi explained that the free training programme was to equip the participants with the fundamentals of the courses to enhance their performance at the Institute's Examination for Diploma in Securities and Investment.
